as a sort of ballast.

The one great error in the utterances is the constant reiteration of the thought that things that have stood the test of time must necessarily have remained good and beneficial. As a matter of fact, a thing may have been eminently beneficial and satisfactory at one time and for a period of years, but may become less beneficial or even harmful as the years go by. New times, require new measures. It is a pity that a man like Mr. Wickersham cannot come to see this truth. As far as the "test of time" argument goes, tyrannical systems of government have existed before the republican form, in more countries and over longer periods of time. Are these forms better than our own because they stood a longer "test of time" than have our form of government? (Putnams).

The bables are suffering. Here is a way to get relief on the principle that evaporation absorbs heat. Take a shallow dish, a pie pan will do. Place in this a saucer with some butter in it, cover with another saucer, cover this with nap-kins or towel, whose ends dip into the piepan. Pour water over this until plepan is full, set in a cool place, where there is a draft. You will, be surprised. It is not nearly as good as an ice box, but it is better than nothing. The towel acts as a wick, carrying the water up, and the draft evaporates the water, this absorbs heat from the saucer and its contents. Try it with your milk in the bottle or with a watermelon.

William F. McCombs gave President Wilson good advice when he counseled him to keep his hands off the New York and Illinois political

This advice may be applied with equal wisdom 12.00 to all state and local politics which concern only the people of a state or a municipality. It is rare gress he will serve the people and not the spethat a President is justified in touching local po- cial interests. litical contests or local issues. Only when a local contest involves national questions of vital conceru or when it may directly affect the nationa administration or the success of policies neces sary to the public welfare is there reasonable grounds for a President to express his opinion or otherwise legitimately throw the weight of administration influence into local politics.

The administration weakens itself by dipping into state and municipal affairs which should be managed by the local people. It angers the voters who have a right to settle their local problems and to choose their candidates. The local voters know their problems and their candidates better than the President and his advisers can know them. They resent interference and have a right

As a rule, administration interference is the result of the influence of men who have local axes to grind and who mislead the President and his advisers to serve their own personal ends. Frequently representatives of interests dupe the administration into pulling their local chestnuts out of the fire. In either case the result invarishly brings the administration into discredit and alienates honest supporters.

The principle of non-interference on the part of the national administration in local politics is $800 bond in a jurisdiction where his offense as clear and sound as the principle of non-inter- would not be bailable at all in the event of his ference on the part of the Federal Government in state affairs.

If the President is wise he will heed Mr. Mc Combs' advice. It is a pity this counsel was not given and heeded before the Wilson administration became entangled in the Texas gubernatorial campaign where administration influence is being misused to help a combine of prohibition demagogues and railroad pirates. Regardless of the outcome the administration can gain nothing by such interference except the just resentment of a great mass of honest voters.

SOUVENIE-HUNTING VANDALS.

An American tourist has been arrested in Dumfries, Scotland, on a charge of theft, the specific allegation being that he took a brass handle from an antique bureau in the Robert Burns cottage. News dispatches telling of the arrest say that the American's friends explained that he was mcrely an overzealous souvenir hunter. If the man did what he is accused of doing, this plea in his behalf ought to increase the indictment from one of petty theft to one of grand larceny. There is no kind of vandalism more contemptible than that of the typical souvenir-hunting variety. If the man is guilty, his punishment should be so severe as forever to serve as an object lesson to that, fortunately small, class of American tourists whose light fingered practices have done more than anything else to discredit their honest compatriots abroad.

COLLINS' SENATE RECORD. The record of John P. Collins as a member of the Missouri Senate in 1901-'05 marks him as conspicuously unfit to represent the Twelfth District in Congress.

His first act as a Senator was to introduce and champion a bill, to throw the St. Louis Board of Education back into ward politics. His bill provided that school board members should be elected from wards, instead of at large. The enactment of his bill would have restored control of the Board of Education to the ward bosses and deprived St. Louis of the benefits of the presen excellent bi-partisan school board system.

Collins served as a member of the Board o Education when the School Board was dominated by ward politicians. The administration of school esolution to require committee reports on all bills within 10 days. He absented himself when amendments to the vicious Nesbit bill, under which wholesale election frauds had been per petrated in St. Louis, were passed. He voted with the lobby against the repeal of the alum baking powder bill, the passage of which had been procured by bribery. His term in the Sen ate was characterized by faithful service to the enate combine led by John Morton and Frank and support the administration of President Wilson, if he should be elected. Did he serve the people of St. Louis when he attempted in the Missouri Senate to turn the Board of Education over to the politicians? Did he serve the per of the State when he stood with the Farris Morton combine on practically every bill that came before the Senate?

The amazing feature of the Twelfth District contest is that the Democratic party organization almost to a man is backing Collins for the nomination. At this critical period of the Wilson administration, when the election of a Democratic party's program of reform, it is folly for the Democratic bosses to foist upon the party a nomiuee who is certain to be defeated in November. It is clearly the duty of the party organization to support a candidate who can be elected, and whose past record gives assurance that in Con-

BAIL IN CLARK'S COURT.

Circuit Attorney Harvey has done well to demend the rearrest of Edward Koenig. The release of Edward Koenig, who shot and dengerously wounded Felix Anderson, on an $800 bond was a remarkable exhibition of justice in Judge B. F. Clark's court.

Edward Koenig's victim is still in danger: his wound may yet prove mortal. Judge Calvin Miller had refused to approve the bond. Judge Clark himself would not approve it. He was on the eve of departure. But he appointed a Provisional Judge, Thomas B. Estep, who, after consultation, did approve it.

In a Market street shooting gallery one may 'empty the gun" at a target for 15 cents. In the pursuit of game in the open season a man may procure a hunter's license in Missouri for a few dollars. Is the shooting of a human victim to be made a cheap pastime in these parts?

The attempted murder of Felix Anderson, the outcome of which is still doubtful, was done by a dangerous man, whether deliberately and premeditatedly or in a frenzy. In either case, the man was set at large-free to repeat his deadly violence or murderous attempts-on a paltry victim's death.

A GOOD MAN GONE.

The community lost one of its most useful, most indispensable citizens the other day in the death of Mr. Charles G. Niemeyer, proofreader 35 years for the city directory.

He was the man who knew all of our names and kept us straight.

He knew when and when not to put a "p" in Thompson and an "O'" on Toole. He knew if Smith was entitled to a "v" or final "e." He knew the Macginnises and the McGinnisses He never mixed the Tillingasts with the Tilinghasts nor the Phillipses with the Philipses. He discerned between a Johnson and a Johnston, a Davison and a Davidson, a Hough and a Huff, a Schulz and a Schultz.

He knew exactly how many John Hogans there are, and how many W. H. Lees.

Every man's occupation was known to him. The Devil on Two Sticks knew no more of what was going on under the roof-tops. Every street and alley and house number the good proofreade knew-and who belonged to which.

He even knew the names of the dead men whom widows belong.

Now, alas, we fear we shall get all mixed up! Nobody will know exactly what his neighbor's name is, or precisely how to spell his own. No body will know his own family, his own kinfolks. Nobody will be sure of his own number. Woe unto us, the deceased may not be positively identified by his relict. The dear departed, as well as the living, will' be forgotten. The world, this considerable part of it, at least, will lose its identity, chaos will reign, unless Providence can raise up a competent successor to Mr. Niemeyer

DELAY IN OUR CIRCUIT COURT.

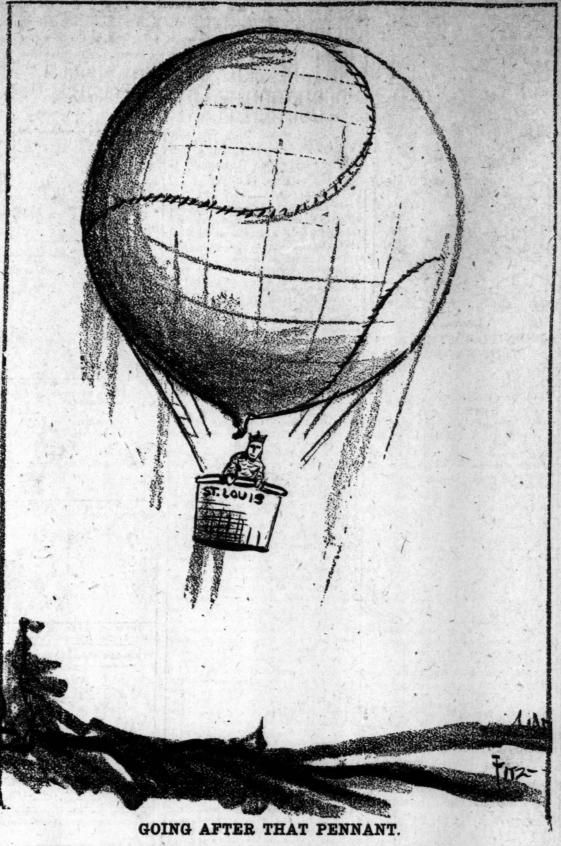

Here is an instance one of many thousandshowing how our mildewed system of procedure in the Circuit Court favors delay. It forcibly illustrates the argument in support of the simple plan, urged on the Circuit Judges by the Bar As-Court charged with the duty of hearing motions,

The case of Smith v. Jones Mfg. Co., in which divsion of the Circuit Court. I assign a fictitious title to the cause, because I am making it the basis of a criticism, not of Judges but of a system. The foregoing, by the way, is the only fiction in this communication; and the true title, number and division of the cause will be supplied on request. The action was begun December 20, 1913, returnable to the February term, 1914. The petition was in two counts-one claiming a recovery of a dividend on shares in the defendant company; the other in assumpsit for goods sold and delivered. The writ was promptly served, and on February 4 the defendant was allowed 20 days within which to file an answer. On the 10th a demurrer was filed to the petition. I cannot recall when the next law day occurred, but I attended. Counsel for the defendant did not apear. Supposing that the demurrer had been filed in good faith, I permitted it to be passed. At the next succeeding law day I again appeared. Adverse counsel did not. I asked that the matter be aken as submitted, and on March 30 the demurrer was overruled. On April 2 defendant fled a motion to elect. At the first law day following I appeared, and as adverse counsel did not, I asked that this motion be taken as submitted. It was overruled on April 27. On April 30 a motion to make the petition more definite and certain was filed. The cause had, in the meantime, been set for trial, and being desirous of bringing it to issue, if possible on May 1, by leave, I struck out the entirely immaterial words in the petition, which the defendant sought to have made more definite and certain. On May 5 the defendant filed a motion to strike out the first count of the etition; and on the 18th the cause was continued, because not at issue. On the 15th, after notice, I presented a motion to overrule, or strike from the files, this last motion, as be-ing interposed for delay. Counsel again did not appear. Court overruled the motion to strike out on that day. On May 19 the defendant filed a general denial—being moved to answer at this time, doubtless because the June settings for this division had already been published, and its counsel felt no doubt that the case could not come to trial before

If there is any argument necessary in support of the plan submitted by the bar association for the establishment of a central division of the Court, charged with the duty of promptly bringing causes to issue, which is not supplied by the history of this case, I do not know what it is.

The archaic, slipshod methods of our Circuit Court, wasteful alike of time and money, would not be tolerated in any business in the world ex-cept the public's business. How long will the Circuit Judges regist the demand for reform?

It was a method of lifting vessels over shoals. It was a simple device. It had only one fault; it would not work. His idea was the equipment of fatboats with huge bellows along the sides. When the boat grounded these bellows were to be inflated by pressure brought to bear on the poles controlling the bellows, which were to be pressed downward, thus opening the bellows by a windlass. In the model this windlasmus from end to end of the boat beneath the "upper deck" or pole-holding superstructure. The inflating of the bellows was supmosed to lift the heat from Battered Browns Still in Hunt. Rickey has several irons in the fire and the announcement may be made at an early date of a deal of some kind tringing a shortstop or a catcher or both to St. Louis. It is to be hoped that such is the case. The Browns, in their battered condition, have managed to tarry in the race without dropping out of the League.

But the addition of a couple of men a month ago would have seen the team in the fight to its neck right now. A flock of games have been filtered away through shortstop and be-ause Sam Agnew had no couple understudy.

Little Clyde Wares is a hustler and Johnny Lavan is a demon fielder. But it is pitiable to see either of these men that at with the tieing or winning runs on the bags. It seems that Rickey has depended too much on Lavan, Wallace and Bill Hollander, the former Georgetown star, now serving his apprenticeship with the Montgomery (Southern League) team.

Hollander is going great guns for Montgomery, doing the Browns no good, right now. Rickey is living in hopes that Lavan will hit; but while Dr. John is getting the experience—and few hits—the Browns have been losing games for want of safe blows.

The expenditure of a good chunk of dough for a shortstop, who can hit and another wad of coin for a good backstop would immediately elevate the Browns to near-pennant dignity. But neither shortstop ner catcher is seen in the offing. Rickey has several irons in the fire

"BILL."

Told by A. D. Brown. ME head office boy of the firm had been told to look out for a new recruit to take the place of one of the boys who had suddenly quit. As the result of an advertisement, many responded seeking the job.

"The first applicant after being casually looked over by the head office boy, was diplomatically dismissed and ushered toward the Washington avenue exit. "When the head office boy returned to his place near my desk, I

"That first applicant you had there, Bill, was a likely looking enough young chap. What'd you turn him down for?"
"'He wouldn't do in a thousand years,' answered Bill very authoritatively. "I judge by the face, Mr. Brown; you didn't look at him good like I did. You want to beware of these hatchet-faced boys. He's just the kind that'd stay around here 10 years, grow side whiskers, and slip into the job of bossin' the whole works before any of us had time to figure out where he got on at!"
